

I am a faithful listener (and financial supporter) of Air 1 radio which is transmitted to my area through an FM translator. I understand the FCC is considering granting LPFM priority status over FM translator service.

This change could cause me, as well as many other faithful listeners across the country, to lose access to our beloved Air 1 radio. I believe this music offers its listeners an alternative to music and talk broadcast by many other stations which can be offensive. I prefer to listen to a station I know will not do so. While there are MANY stations of the former type from which the general population may choose, there are only a couple (of which Air 1 is the best, in my humble opinion) of the former from which listeners like myself may choose.

In addition, Air 1 offers programming that is a source of encouragement and even a beacon of hope in many cases. Displacing this from our air waves would be a big mistake.

Thank you for taking time to consider my opinion in this matter. I hope you will let us keep our FM translator service as it is currently configured.

Rene' Williams